General Eisenhower won an overwhelming victory.

Today was a fairly slack day in Government. Most of the people I saw had hangovers, ~~which were~~ not altogether political.

Lowell Weicker called me from New York this morning about the possibility of his obtaining a Government position. This should not be difficult ^{for him} to arrange.

I had a long talk with John Hightower regarding ~~the~~ methods by which the new Administration could best enter into consultations about international problems that would arise during the transition period.

We had meetings off and on in the Secretary's office today on ~~the~~ matters pending before the UN.

Tonight, we went to dinner at Ethel Fowler's with about a dozen other people.
